First Year Students

First-year students at Loyola are encouraged to spend their first few months of law school focusing on their coursework and acclimating to law school. To that end, full-time first-year JD students may not apply to legal positions before December 1. However, 1Ls are permitted to participate in activities geared toward learning about the legal profession and professional development prior to December 1. Prospective employers should not begin soliciting applications directly from full-time first-year JD students prior to December 1. Part-time JD students may be contacted sooner. There are no timing restrictions related to informational interactions with full-time first-year JD students.
